Radio shack catalogs online

Maintaining an online course catalog provides students and potential students with a sought-after source that offers them insights into the fields of study and the types of classes provided by your school, college, or university. To create a directory of your online courses, follow these steps. Decide what type of course catalogue you want to provide to your students. Some educational institutions provide a course catalog where you can search where a student chooses a study area from the drop-down box, and then accesses Search, while others select a simple PDF online course directory for student viewing. Determine how long your course directory should cover. Most schools provide a course catalogue during the year or trimester, quarterly or semester. Create a list of courses that you will suggest if you do not already have a published publication. Include dates for courses, faculty, course summaries, and semester or course completion credit hours. Please note whether the courses are online or can only be accepted in person. This can reduce phone calls to your reception office to ask questions about specific courses. Create a home page that contains the name and logo of the institution, while indicating that it is a course directory. Format the course list by study area, such as English, history, or other areas. Formatting catalog course information will help students search the guide without difficulty. If necessary, add links to university information, registration data, or information about the teacher who taught the course. Create content that matches the course catalog so that it is easily accessible and the content in the structured online course directory. Edit the copy before publishing the course catalog to make sure it doesn't contain spelling, grammar, and content areas. Publish the course catalog online. Make sure everything on the site works fine. Update your courses when changes are made, and be sure to update your dates or conditions regularly. Tips If you choose to have a course catalog in PDF format, make sure that there is a note in the area to download the file, and explain whether you will need Adobe Acrobat or Adobe Acrobat Reader. Publishing a course catalog online provides an economical way to communicate with students. Warnings Your college or university may consider including a disclaimer in your course directory stating that course time, instructors and descriptions may change. These may not be the last hits, but the price is right. BOSTON (MainStreet) - The coming weeks will see a continued push for internet radio stations, music services and app-based content aggregators looking to take a bite from satellite-based Sirius XM (SIRI) - Get Report. It also faces the challenge of cloud music services offered through key technology players such as Apple (AAPL) - Get Report and Google (GOOG) - Get Report.Sirius XM is not visible, but still intensifies, the wave of competition easily. For several months, she has been annoying the initiative she calls Satellite Radio 2.0, a hardware update about which there has been much speculation, though not many details. Beans was spilled last week when the FCC made various documents related to the initiative (to be launched this quarter) publicly on its website. Satellite sirius XM radio pays Howard Stern more than $100 million a year as part of its 135 commercial channels. But there are still challenges splitting away its more than 21 million subscribers. The technical equipment functions of the project codenam Lynx are described in detail in the documentation. Among them there is a universal connection option, the ability to add accessories for your home, office, additional vehicles or even outdoors. Updates also include connection options using satellite, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, and USB. The wider range of communication offers is likely to be a response to the growth of internet radio stations, HD radio and smartphones and tablets. Portability to move the receiver out of the car and to the home or office could help increase retail and, perhaps, sway on-the-fence subscribers. Other, aesthetic improvements may be the selling point of all the important car manufacturers Sirius XM courts to expand their listener base. Among the vehicles that can include satellite radio are those developed by Ford (F) - Get Report, GM (GM) - Get Report, Toyota (TM) - Get Report, Nissan (NSANY) and Infiniti. Sirius XM aficionados claims that the growing number of radio competitors is not even approaching with the width and diversity of the content of the service, diversity, offers up to 135 commercial content channels for more than 21 million subscribers. It can also be said that they pose a greater threat to traditional terrestrial radio than a paid satellite radio service. Also, these relatively new companies cannot spend as Sirius XM has. Sirius said that it spent nearly $306 million last year on content (and that doesn't even include music). In particular, Howard Stern paid more than $100 million a year and the NFL and MLB add up to another $90 million. Nevertheless, various internet radio stations and music services are hoping to give Sirius XM a run for their money. After successfully coming out of public engagement, Pandora (P) may be your most face of Sirius XM competitors. It has made tremendous progress in carving out a loyal user base and offering free and paid service tiers. What may work on Sirius XM's superiority in head-to-head competition is that the company, after an IPO, may face shareholder demands to increase revenue, which leads to more advertising, a potential deal breaker luring listeners back to satellite service content without advertising. Sirius XM also offers a long list of talk-based programming, although all the music Pandora has yet to fork out with. Nevertheless, Pandora has brand recognition and business deals that can lose Sirius XM executives to sleep. Its free music app is the most downloaded of its kind in Apple iOS and Google Android app stores. He's also picking into the automaker's gaming fight, starting deals with Ford's Chevrolet, Daimler (DAI), Cadillac and BMW. On October 6, Pandora announced that Toyota is offering an embedded version of its services for the 2012 Camrys and Tacomas through its Entune system. Pandora controllers are placed on dashboard radio, and drivers and passengers can connect using Android, Blackberry and iPhone smartphones. The online music service Rhapsody has been around since 2001, making it one of the oldest of its kind. Bought by RealNetworks in 2003, it was twisted back into its own last year and now has about 1.5 subscribers access to the library's 11 million songs. On October 3, Rhapsody announced that it had signed an agreement with Napster, the once notorious file-sharing service that has long gone legal and is now the best buy unit. Rhapsody will acquire Napster subscribers and other assets, and Best Buy (BBY) - Get Report will receive a minority stake. The deal is expected to close by the end of November. The deal will connect subscriber bases to the two largest on-demand music services in the US, adding as many as 700,000 subscribers to rhapsody's base to 1.5 million. This is to go big or go home for business, so our focus is on a sustainable growing company. Jon Irwin, president of Rhapsody, said in a statement. We looked at another 10 players and systems in the online radio space, trying to take Irwin to this advice by throwing out the bite of Sirius XM, Pandora and Rhapsody - many of whom do so free services or unique features. the iHeartRadio Gaming Community can create another challenge for the satellite radio company. On October 5, Clear Channel Radio announced that it had expanded its multi-year partnership with Microsoft (MSFT) - Get Report to integrate iHeartRadio, its free digital radio service, into xbox 360. This winter iHeartRadio will be able to use Xbox Live gold members for free. With the motion-controlled Kinect accessory, they can control digital radio on their website using their voice and body. Users without Kinect can use a standard controller to access more than 800 live broadcasts and digital radio stations. iHeartRadio's potential is mainly due to the availability of the parent company. With 237 million monthly listeners in the US, Clear Channel Radio has the highest reach of any radio or television outlet. Its programming includes AM/FM stations, HD digital radio channels, the Internet and even offering Sirius XM itself. SpotifyThe popular European-based service Spotify, although initially plagued by licensing issues, hit the US last summer and expanded its reach using Facebook's power. Spotify has more than 10 million registered users, more than 2 million paying subscribers in Europe and the U.S. pay for the highest quality (without advertising) tiers. Spotify promotes on-demand access, in addition to buffering into the library of more than 15 million songs and the ability to import MP3 files. His social media approach is more unique. Playlists can be shared, and 250 million of them have been accessed by all users. Music choices can also be shared via Facebook, Twitter, email and SMS messages. As part of its US launch, Spotify has announced a variety of corporate partnerships, among them deals and promotions with Coca-Cola (KO) - Get Report, Chevrolet, Motorola (MOT) and Reebok. The biggest of all, perhaps, is its participation in Facebook's new music-sharing service. After all, Facebook users will be able to see what their friends are listening to and listening to that music. The SlackerSporting logo, created by artist Shepard Fairey, Slacker provides on-demand access to its music library for iOS, Android and BlackBerry smartphones and tablets. Paid subscription offerings ($9.99 per month) allow listeners to search, play and repeat specific songs and entire albums from more than 8 million song libraries or listen to a team of more than 150 expert programmed stations produced by 70 DJs. Listeners also have the ability to create playlists on both mobile platforms and the Internet and get off-line playback through the ability to cache stations, playlists and the entire album. What may turn out to be a notable selling point is sports content provided by ESPN. Key listeners have access to the ESPN station, and subscribers can add customizable ESPN updates to their selected stations. So is a cheaper, $3.99 subscription version and ad-supported free platform. Platform. On October 6, Rdio, the founders of a digital music service created by Skype, announced the launch of free, on-demand music offerings without ads. The service offers a catalogue of 12 million songs, the ability to create custom and collaborative playlists and various artists and labels for radio stations. Only an email address or Facebook account is required to sign up, no software downloads or credit card information are required. Rdio's integration into Facebook's Open Graph platform means that users can instantly share and play any song on a news feed, ticker, or timeline. Paid tiers - from $4.99 per month to $22.99 for a family plan for multiple users - allow smartphone access and wireless synchronization to listen offline. StitcherStitcher takes a different approach to its content and serves as a hub for online, third-party content from online radio and podcasts. It can be accessed via a web browser or mobile apps. Unlike other services that focus, if not exclusively, on music, Stitcher provides a collection of talking content from various media outlets that include NPR, CNN, Fox News, MSNBC and the BBC, as well as thousands of smaller, independent outlets (where content is subscription-only as a provider for the service). More than 6,000 shows as the company looks to pull in more than $5 billion in revenue for talk radio ads generated each year. The free service has 3.4 million registered users and is available on iOS, Android, BlackBerry and webOS. MOGMOG's online music service has a pedigree that can provide it with much-needed help. Its funding was partly from Universal Music Group and Sony (SNE) - Get Report. Its founder, David, is a former head of MTV, and legendary producer Rick Rubin is a member of its board of directors. Its streaming services (there are two paid tiers, $9.99 and $4.99 per month and a free offer) are available on certain HDTV and Blu-ray player models, while the company, among others, has deals with Roku, Samsung and LG. The company has also secured a deal to launch its services for BMW vehicles through its iDrive system. The service touts industry-leading music discovery technology and filters to make it easy to find content that includes news and reviews through your network of participating music sites and blogs. The company has also been beeping up its integration with Facebook and last month launched FreePlay, a free browser-based version. This option allows you to set up a music fuel tank that depletes every time you use it, but can be supplemented through a game-inspired reward system for social media interaction that promotes the service. Last.mLast.fm is one of the better known music services and has unique features Sirius XM can't offer and other online services yet master (but trying), describes itself as a music recommendation service and uses something called scrobble to monitor what the user listens to and pump back recommendations based on based on and other choices. Songs and performers that are often played help to improve their suggestions. The monitoring system also helps the service develop recommendations for others through a database of more than 43 billion scribes who have been retained so far from 40 million members. For a more personal touch... If your idea of good radio veers is more DIY/pirate variety, there are thousands of small, sometimes self-run radio sites that any good web search engine should help you uncover. Various apps, including hardware such as Apple TV, can help you access many of these hidden gems. Among the sites slaughtering these independent shows, ShouCast Radio Directory has nearly 49,000 free internet stations to choose from and, at any given time, nearly half a million people broadcast radio. AccuRadio consists of hundreds of different radio channels covering 60 genres. All are programmed by people who love music rather than using computed computer algorithms, it says. The Live365 radio network claims to reach millions of listeners around the world by offering a higher width of high-quality streaming music, chat and audio than any other network. It has more than 260 music genres created by more than 5,000 broadcasters and music taste makers from more than 150 countries. Through easy-to-use tools and services, as well as royalty coverage, anyone with a computer and Internet connection can build their own internet radio station and reach a global audience with minimal costs and efforts, promises the Silicon Valley website. - Written by Joe Mont in Boston. >Want to contact the writer of this article, click here: Joe Mont. >Want to follow the writer on Twitter, go to - >To provide news tip, send an email to tips@thestreet.com.
